

WHY BLAINE RESIGNED.

Secretary Blaine consented to be interviewed regarding his resignation and told the reporter that it was not occasioned by the near approach of the Republican Convention and would not effect the action of that body in the slightest degree. His object in retiring from the State Department was to obtain personal freedom and peace. He was not influenced in the least by the probability of the proffered nomination, and the sensational rumors that he was working to accomplish Harrison's defeat. These reports apparently had a perceptible effect upon the President's personal friends and admirers. The feeling grew upon Mr. Blaine daily that he was regarded with suspicion and distrust. The friends of the Administration practically considered him guilty of duplicity and he fancied that even his associates in the Cabinet looked upon him with silent reproach. There seemed also a constant desire to humiliate him by urging the necessity of a further public declaration that he was not a candidate for the Republican nomination. These thoughts and suspicions constantly preyed upon his mind until the worry became intolerable and he determined to resign in order that he might enjoy as a private citizen the rest denied him as a part of the Administration.

If Mr. Blaine had no other motive in resigning than to disarm the suspicion that he was disloyal to his chief, and to enjoy rest as a private citizen, under no circumstances will he accept the nomination should it be tendered him. It does seem, however, that his letter to Clarkson was not sincere. If he had no disposition to enter the Presidential race, he could have dissuaded the minds of his associates in the Cabinet and the friends of the President of the idea that he was playing them false. Only the positive assurance of Mr. Blaine that he will not accept the nomination for President will satisfy those who are not infatuated with the gentleman and think he can do no wrong, that he was not playing them false, and wrote his February letter to Clarkson to throw Harrison's friends off their guard.

THE MINNEAPOLIS CONVENTION.

As the good Musselman, the devoted follower of Mohammed, turns his eyes toward Mecca, when he arises, so nearly every American citizen will turn his attention to Minneapolis this morning. Eight hundred and ninety-eight delegates, representatives of the Republican party from every State and Territory, and at least 25,000 strangers, the representatives of Presidential aspirants and of newspapers, are in that city. The politicians who are marshaling their hosts for the fray are among the brightest and most unscrupulous in the land. The most prominent candidates are Harrison and Blaine, but there are a number with their ears to the ground listening for a call.

It is believed that owing to the bitterness engendered between the followers of Harrison and Blaine, that neither will be nominated, though the leaders of each faction claim a majority for their favorite. It is conceded that Harrison will have the largest vote on the first ballot and perhaps enough to nominate him, as in Republican conventions a bare majority decides the contest. In this State a majority of the people are more interested in the platform than in the candidate. What Nevada wants most is a free coinage plank and assurance that the nominee favors the remonetization of silver. Blaine's record on silver is fully as bad if not worse than Harrison's or Cleveland's. He voted against the Free Coinage bill passed by the House of Representatives in 1875, and even after the bill was emasculated by the Senate, he recorded his vote against it. Last Fall, during the Ohio campaign, he renewed his hostility to silver and absolved the silver producing States from any obligations they might owe him for his opposition to Chinese immigration.

However, as the Journal is for free coinage, it does not care who the nominee may be if the platform if the platform is unequivocally for the remonetization of silver.

POINTED AND SENSIBLE.

There are seven People's party members in the House of Representatives. In reply to a communication addressed to each member by M. H. Slater, Chairman of the Executive Committee of the Colorado Silver League, they send a joint communication of which the following is a part:

"As to the two old parties, we would ask what more can they promise in the future than they have in the past? And if they failed to keep their promises in the past, will they do so in the future? Their platforms remind one of the platforms of railroad trains. They are not made to stand on, but to get in on. They are constructed on the kaleidoscope plan. They promise everything to everybody before election, and then proceed to serve their masters in Wall Street and London. It was a new party that gave us freedom from King George. It was a new party that gave us freedom on the high seas. It was a new party that abolished slavery. And in our opinion there must be a new party to free us from industrial slavery. You can't preserve new wine in old bottles. You cannot renew senility. You cannot gather grapes from thorns nor figs from thistles. Have you not courted Wall Street parties long enough? Our doors are wide open for all earnest and patriotic men.—Whether the silver men in the old parties join us or not the People's party will continue the battle for free coinage."

Ex-Senator Ingalls predicts the nomination of McKinley at Indianapolis. He thinks if Harrison is defeated his friends would go to the Ohio Governor rather than to Blaine or Alger.

Euroka has the names of one thousand voters on the rolls of the silver clubs, each and every one pledged to vote for no man who is not unequivocally for free coinage.

MINNEAPOLIS CONVENTION.

The Harrison Managers Holding the Delegates Well in Hand.

KILLED BY A YOUNG LADY.

A Terrible Disaster. In Which a Large Number of People Are Killed—Proceedings of the House.

Looks Favorable for Harrison.

MINNEAPOLIS, June 6.—The sun goes down without any decisive gain by either faction. The Harrison managers are holding the delegates well in hand, while the Blaine side is reinforced by outside influence. No doubt the President has an advantage in instruction, which binds a majority, whose choice otherwise would be for the statesman from Maine. The Harrison managers are displaying generalship in keeping the forces pledged to vote for the President on the first ballot. They count on a nomination on the first ballot, and the figures they exhibit are confirmed by information from other sources. There is not a doubt that the convention, should it reach a vote to-morrow, Harrison would win. The outspoken support of Chauncey M. Depew, Gen. Horace Porter, Governor McKinley and Senator Sherman has been the chief factor in keeping a majority of the delegates in support of the President.

The Blaine people, while showing no signs of discouragement, are seeking to defeat a majority on the first ballot, the policy being to bring the favorite sons into the field and divide the vote. Several delegates argue that the fight between Harrison and Blaine, will make the selection of a third man a necessity. The number advising the selection of a candidate not involved in the factional contest is increasing. The contest between Harrison and Blaine is growing so close that the party nomination may depend on the decision of the Committee on Contests. The committee is now in session and its action is not clearing to the Harrison men, who were counting on almost solid delegations from the Southern States. In many instances they are able to hold their ground, but on the whole, and in Alabama especially, they are hard hit. Harrison men are angry at the way the contests are being decided and threaten to make a fight on the National Committee all along the line. Members of the Southern delegations find themselves important, the Harrison men making strong efforts to hold them in line. While the anti-Harrison forces are bringing all means at their command to break into the South with effect, Fred Douglas is actually at work in favor of Harrison's cause. He denounced Blaine on account of his opposition to the Force bill. Warner Miller is doing missionary work for Blaine among the colored delegates. Ex-Senator Bruce, Auditor Lynch and other colored men are working for Harrison. Another conservative estimate to-night on the result of the convention gives Blaine, 459; Harrison, 415; Alger, 28.

It is estimated that nine-tenths of the delegates are in the city to-night and the indications are that both factions will be found greatly at variance with regard to the exact figures when the decisive ballot is taken, and every passing word tends to convince the casual observer that the contest is a bitter one and a very close one. Conservative men on both sides are not claiming a majority of over a hundred votes, and it is thought by many that the decisive ballot will show that the winning candidate will have less than half that number.

A hot controversy broke out at the beginning of the caucus between delegates this afternoon in the headquarters of the California delegation. Fully 150 delegates were present from the Pacific Coast and Rocky Mountain States. Senator Teller from Colorado was the center of the controversy. He was supported by Boutelle of Maine, the latter spoke with marked emotion of the Western support of Blaine in 1884, and that he had been escorted to this home by the California delegates. Proceeding, Boutelle urged that it would be no less fitting now, Senator Jones of Nevada followed Boutelle.

Jones declared that Harrison was dangerous because of his veto propensities, and said he threatened to veto the free coinage bill. Judge Spence contradicted Jones point blank, and said that if a split occurred in the Republican party through the action of the convention, the blame would rest on Blaine. DeYoung moved that the sense of the caucus was that a committee composed of one member from each delegation represented be appointed for the purpose of embodying the wants of the meeting in the form of a resolution, to be presented to the National Committee on Platform. The motion was carried with a tremendous hurrah, and the caucus adjourned with the Blaine feeling aroused to a high pitch.

A BANQUET OF CROW.

Invitations Now Being Prepared for the November Political Symposium of the Unregenerated-The President's Grace.

Invitations are already being prepared for a select banquet of crow to occur in the early part of next November. The feast will take place in the rooms of "the organ" on Virginia street, and the participants of the feast will be regaled with the reproduced music of "the organ," as the cheerful notes of the past year in linked sweetness are again long drawn out.

At the conclusion of "the organ's" overture, entitled "Wall Street, My Wall Street," or "Oh, Where Is My Gold Bug To-night," the following dialogue will occur:

Allen.—Great heaven, you needn't bring in any more crow; the table is groaning with it now.

Peeping Tom.—But there are lots more, and the silver men say that you have got to eat it all. They want to see the fun, and day am laughing.

Allen (laughing).—Oh, shades of fallen Wall street! Start the "organ" playing "Auntie Lavinia" and drown the sound. Hear them! Oh, ye Gods of Mammon, look at the crowd!

Peeping Tom.—Dar am a powerful lot of it, but, as you are born. Sit up gentlemen. I can get any mo' on till you eat some of what am dar. I declare to goodness dar am mo' in de kitchen.

Allen (groaning).—Sit up, gentlemen Major, will you set at the head of the table and ask grace. (All sit down to the table.)

Major (fervently).—Oh, Lord, may this be the last. Amen.

Omnos (with equal fervor).—Amen.

Major.—Allen, do you prefer a wing or the breast?

Allen.—Ugh! Give me the feathers. There, there, enough.

Major.—Don't be alarmed. There will be a plenty to go around. And remember, as the lion, you deserve the lion's share. Have you any preference for one part over another, Charley?

Charley.—Yes, give me the brains.

Major.—There is not enough to do you any good, my dear fellow, but you are welcome to what there is. Peeping Tom, what shall I help you to?

Peeping Tom.—Oh, sah, I never eat with gentlemen.

Major.—I know that it is something unusual for you, but we will make an exception in your favor to-day, as we have a treat. Have some crow.

Peeping Tom (blubbering).—Oh, what have I elber done dat you should treat me so?

Major.—Done! Great heaven, didn't you bring in some of this crow for us?

Peeping Tom.—I 'clare to goodness, I don't know; I done was absent minded, sah.

Major.—Crow, crow, everywhere, and not a drop to drink. It is well that I am used to it. But how long, oh Lord, how long?

Charley.—And no seasoning on the crow, Ugh.

Peeping Tom (Two hours later, all the rest being speechless).—Dar has been a powerful change taken place inside dis here chile. I is distended wid crow, and dey seems to be all hatched in. (Feebly.) Oh, Lor', Dar is one jus' laid an egg. I can hear 'em, I can hear 'em cackle. De Lor' hab mercy on me, a siner. (Expires.)

At this point in the banquet the following band with will appear on the wall: "Mene, mene teke, N. G."

A Montgomery vs. P. N. Marker.

This case was transferred from Humboldt county to this place for trial by stipulation of the parties. Yesterday the testimony was taken in open court, and the case submitted. The action is brought to foreclose a mortgage on lands near Lovelock. H. C. Marker by Col. A. C. Ellis, his attorney, asked leave to intervene in the suit, claiming that the land mortgaged by P. N. Marker is co-partnership property of H. C. Marker & Co., and that as a partner has an interest in said property, which P. N. Marker could not mortgage. The intervention was denied, the Court holding that whatever interest, if any, H. C. Marker has, is not affected by this action, and that he should not have waited till the hour of trial before he declared his rights in this proceeding. G. F. Goad appeared as attorney for Montgomery, Judge Boardman and M. S. Bonfield for P. N. Marker. The Court will give his decision on the 21st instant at Winnemucca.

The Reno Guards.

The Guards held their monthly meeting last night at the Armory, Lieutenant Helms presiding. The usual bills were read and ordered paid. Three new members were added to the roster and three resignations were accepted. The Financial Secretary reported the receipts of the month as $247 and the disbursements as $204, leaving a balance in the treasury of $43. The Fire and Drum Corps, which the Company intend organizing, will be a most attractive feature of the Company. The Guards were never stronger than at present and with faithful and efficient officers and enthusiastic and obedient privates the future of the Company is most promising. They decided to accept the Carson invitation to celebrate on the 4th.

THE STATE AGRICULTURAL SOCIETY.

Programme and Premiums for the Eighth Annual Fair.

Programmes are out for the Eighth Annual Fair of the Nevada State Agricultural Society, which is to be held at the Society's ground near Reno September 19th to 24th inclusive. The Society has appropriated $10,000 in premiums. One hundred dollars will be paid for the best county exhibit, Washoe county being excepted. The Central Pacific Railroad Company will transport all animals at the Fair over their road free of charge.

The Directors are C. C. Powning, M. D. Foley, W. O. H. Martin, W. H. Gould, P. H. Mulenby, Theodore Winters of Washoe county; H. F. Dangberg of Douglas county; H. M. Yerrington of Ormsby county; W. S. Bailey of Churchill county; Thomas Peterson of Storey county; Joseph Marz-n of Humboldt county and J. B. Bradley of Elko county.

The officers for the present year are: Theodore Winters, President; C. H. Stoddard, Secretary; O. T. Bender, Treasurer.

Fashion Pointers.

Colored shirts are again in style. Very beautiful and dainty are the white lace shoulder capes shown for summer wear.

Big flare lace hats, covered with flowers, are to be just as fashionable this as last season.

Stout women who aspire to the wasp-like waist continue to make themselves deformed.

High heeled shoes are now worn more than for years, and it is a fashion to be regretted.

White veils are much more trying than black and should be worn only by those having high color.

For wear with white gowns petticoats of white washable silk are used, completing the rest and disfigurement of the white sash or muslin petticoat.—N. Y. Mail.

Colored and dotted organdies are the fashionable thin muslins for elaborate summer dresses. The fancy is to choose these with flowers of natural colors on a ground of contrasting color, and make them over silk or else plain organdy of the color prevailing in the flowers.

The Grand Army Reunion.

C. J. Boskowitz, J. V. Department Commander, G. A. R., who arrived in Reno last night, says the G. P. will make a half fare from all points to Reno and the V. & T. will sell the round trip tickets from Reno to Carson for one dollar to the reunion of the G. A. R., July 4th next. The tickets will be good until July 7th. The Veterans Guard of California and Presidio band and Past Department officers and the commander and his staff will attend the reunion, and it is hoped that every member of the G. A. R. in Nevada will be present. General O. M. Mitchell Post of Reno has been requested to act as escort to the Veterans Guard and Department officers.

The Riverside Wheelmen.

The cyclists met last night and formed a bicycle club to be known as the Riverside Wheelmen. The charter members are N. E. Wilson, President; Frank A. Barnes, Secretary; Robert Lowery, Captain; R. S. Osborn, Lieutenant; Jay H. Clemens, Bagler; J. W. Phillips, J. H. Clark, R. L. Osborn, Robt. C. Moore, Ed. Barber, Marcus Fredericks and R. C. Leeper.

The first run will be held on Wednesday evening. The roads around Reno are very good for bicycles and the number of wheels is increasing very rapidly.

Mrs. N. E. Wilson, Miss Maud Bradley and Miss Annie H. Martin were elected honorary members of the club.

A Bushel of Pills.

And every one wants to stick fast in the throat, and feels as though they did stick somewhere. Away with them and take Simmons Liver Regulation. One-half teaspoonful is a dose, and it goes down pleasantly. You'll find it a mild laxative, with no gripping and does not debilitate. It quickly relieves the system of malarial poison, and cures Constipation, Indigestion, Bilio-nousness and Sick Headache.

Notice.

The Board of Examiners for Washoe county will be in session June 28th for the purpose of examining applicants for certificates as teachers in our public schools. The Board will meet for that purpose at High School building, in Reno, at 10 o'clock a. m., June 28, 1892.

WOMAN SUFFRAGE IN GREAT BRITAIN.

An Analysis of the Recent Vote in the Lower House of Parliament.

One of the most important incidents connected with the movement for the emancipation of women was the vote in the house of commons on the woman's suffrage bill moved by Sir Albert Rollitt. The fact that this measure was defeated by only twenty-three votes is surprising when we consider that it was unsatisfactory to many female advocates of the principle, and was opposed by Gladstone, not only in parliament, but in a lately published pamphlet.

The bill in question proposed to confer the parliamentary franchise only on unmarried women. As there are no obvious reasons for supposing the intended beneficiaries of the measure to be better qualified to vote than their married sisters, while there are some reasons for assuming the contrary, the bill naturally provoked a great deal of criticism among the members of the sex interested. In several meetings held in London Sir Albert Rollitt was denounced in terms which showed that female politicians would be adepts in the use of vituperative rhetoric.

The Primrose League, most of whose principal promoters are married ladies, was shocked at the notion that women who had never proved their capacity to control a household should be deemed particularly competent to deal with public affairs. Nevertheless, there was a prevailing willingness to accept the Rollitt bill as an installment of the reform demanded, and it does not appear that a single vote was lost on the division—unless it was that of Lord Randolph Churchill—by reason of the proposed exclusion of married women. The defeat of the woman suffragists is no doubt directly traceable to Mr. Gladstone, who must therefore expect to have the female reformers against him in the coming general election.

An analysis of the vote shows that the controversy did not turn on party lines. Such leading Tories as Sir Michael Hicks-Booth and Mr. Chaplin opposed the bill, but Mr. Balfour favored it and apparently carried with him a majority of the Conservatives. Sir William Harcourt, Mr. Labouchere and Mr. Chamberlain were arrayed with Mr. Gladstone against the measure, and so it seems were most of the Irish Nationalists. On the other hand, a strong Liberal minority supported the Rollitt proposal, so strong that the reformers look forward with confidence to attaining their object in the next house of commons. Their belief is that Mr. Balfour will then carry with him a larger proportion of the Conservatives than he did last week, and that the number of their allies among the Liberals will be materially increased. The bill, however, which will then be brought forward, will be of wider scope, making no discrimination between the married and the unmarried, and bestowing the suffrage upon adult women on terms identical with those imposed in the case of adult males.

It is an interesting coincidence that the English female suffragists should have recently lost the support of two influential men—Mr. Gladstone and Mr. Herbert Spencer, both of whom were formerly regarded as friendly to their cause. Mr. Spencer, indeed, at one time expressed in print opinions favorable to the political equality of women. Those opinions, however, he recanted in a lately published work, and set forth at length his reasons for believing that women should not be intrusted with the ballot in the existing conditions of society. He does not confine himself to the familiar argument that they who vote must in the last resort be prepared to fight.

He contends that, even if female voters are placed in the same category as adult male voters who have passed the military age, there are special grounds on which their influence in legislation is to be deprecated. One of their most amiable weaknesses, their propensity to compassion, might, he thinks, have grievous consequences in parliament and in the courtroom, that is to say, both in the framing and in the enforcement of statutes. The fact that with their feeling is relatively a more powerful instigator of action than is reason, constitutes, in Mr. Spencer's mind, a grave disability. In a word, he takes for granted that England would be flooded with what in this country we call crank legislation if women had the right to vote.

But while the female suffragists have lost Mr. Spencer and Mr. Gladstone, they have gained Mr. Balfour, and they evidently think that the latter, being a young man with a long public career before him, will ultimately outweigh the loss of the other two. Besides, with the spread of socialism among the trade unions, they are likely to gain the support of workmen who have hitherto been indifferent to their claims. It is certain that they are not in the least disheartened by last week's defeat, but look forward cheerfully, as we have said, to a renewal of the contest next year under more auspicious conditions.—New York Sun.
